

WHO IS SUPERMAN?

by Lois Lane

Can you read my mind?

Do you know what it is you do to me?
Don't know who you are,
Just a friend from another star
Here I am like a kid at a school
Holding hands with a god, I'm a fool
Will you look at me quivering
Like a little girl shivering?
You can see right through me
Can you read my mind?
Can you picture the things I'm thinking of? Wondering why you are
All the wonderful things you are
You can fly, you belong to the sky
You and I could belong to each other
If you need a friend,
I'm the one to fly to
If you need to be loved, (to be loved)
Here I am, read my mind!
Will you look at me quivering
Like a little girl shivering?
You can see right through me
If you need a friend,
I'm the one to fly to
If you need to be loved,
Here I am, read my mind!
Read my mind!

Faster than a speeding bullet.
More powerful than a locomotive.
Able to leap tall buildings in a single bound. Look! Up in the sky!
It's a bird. It's a plane. It's Superman! Yes, it's superman, strange visitor from another planet who came to earth with powers and abilities far beyond those of mortal men. Superman, who can change the course of mighty rivers, bend steel in his bare hands. And who, disguised as Clark Kent, mild-mannered reporter for a great metropolitan newspaper, fights a never ending battle for truth, justice and the American way.
And now another exciting episode in the adventures of Superman.

I am I am I am Superman and I know what's happening. I am I am I am Superman and I can do anything. You don't really love that guy you make it with now do you? I know you don't love that guy cause I can see right through you. I am I am I am Superman and I know what's happening. I am I am I am Superman and I can do anything. If you go a million miles away I'll track you down girl. Trust me when I say I know the pathway to your heart. If you go a million miles away I'll track you down girl. Trust me when I say I know the pathway to your heart. I am I am Superman and I know what's happening. I am I am I am Superman and I can do anything. I am I am I am Superman and I know what's happening. I am I am I am Superman and I can do anything.

SUPERMAN SAVES THE DAY!

Reported by: Henry Bak

Yesterday Superman foiled the attempted robbery of one billion dollars in gold, and boy is Uncle Sam ever grateful.

The gold was being shipped to the U.S. Mint via armored train when a team of thieves struck. Metropolis P.D. reports that at 6:36 P.M. several masked men armed with automatic weapons entered the rear car just as the train left Union Station. They subdued the guards positioned at the rear and donned the guards' uniforms. The thieves then made their way to the middle of the train where the gold had been stashed. Upon arriving at the car that contained the gold, the robbers unhooked the rear cars from train. The majority of the guards were stationed in the rear behind the gold. A quick-thinking engineer radioed for help when he saw the guards' cars sailing backwards as the train sped down the track. The gunmen burst into the locomotive, shot the radio dead and took the engineer hostage. This left the train of bullion nearly defenseless. I say nearly defenseless, because nothing in the Big Apple is ever truly defenseless as long as the "Man of Steel" is around.

"It was the darnedest thing I ever saw! A streak of red and blue shot past the window," John, the train engineer, later related. He went on to say, "That's when I heard the wheels grinding, screeching to a halt. Like someone put the brakes on the whole train." The sound John heard was Superman pushing against the engine. Exerting more power than the locomotive, Metropolis' favorite son quickly had the train stopped dead in its tracks. With blinding speed, Superman then dispatched the masked gunmen one by one until the train of taxpayers' treasure was safe once more.

When Metropolis P.D. arrived on the scene they found the team of robbers tied together...with a piece of railroad track! Superman gave his account of the incident to the police before flying away. The Secretary of State later issued the following statement, "The theft of the gold bound for the Mint would have had disastrous consequences for this nation and its people. At this time, I wish to convey to Superman the deepest gratitude of the President, and indeed of all the citizens of these United States." But perhaps Superman's act can be best summed up in the words of John, the train engineer held at gunpoint. "I gotta tell you, that Superman really saved the day!"

METROPOLIS IS ALIVE WITH SIGNS OF URBAN GROWTH

Reported by: Clark Kent

As Metropolis, the "City of Tomorrow," continues to rebound in a resurgent economy, various signs of increasing urbanization can be seen throughout the six boroughs. From the area of North Bridge to the university district in Mount Royal to the lower-income neighborhoods in Suicide Slum, you can see the city's landscape changing and developing.

The most noticeable of these changes is the new Jurgens Field ballpark, home to the Metropolis Monarchs, in North Bridge. The decision to relocate the Monarchs from Midtown to their own park was a controversial move four years ago, but the ballpark's inaugural season proved to be an economic boom to the surrounding area. Simple back roads near Jurgens Field have now become major thoroughfares, and a number of new restaurants and sports bars have breathed new life into the entire district.

Over in Queensland Park, the Mount Royal district has seen undeveloped land turned into college apartments and condominiums. Metropolis University has increased in size, building new research centers and a series of University Hospital offices on the west end. In addition, the former Perez Plaza Shopping Center has received an extensive makeover, adding an elaborate 24-screen movie theater and renovating itself into an open-air facility known as The Shops at Perez Plaza.

Racine was once known as home to Metropolis' artistic community, but after being discovered as an area with decent living spaces at lower rents, it was quickly overrun with business professionals. A number of townhomes and loft apartments have been significantly renovated with trendy shops and nightclubs now decorating formerly undeveloped land and forest areas. The artists, meanwhile, have relocated to the Pelham district, taking over the older homes and small apartment buildings and transforming the area into a major source of art galleries, live music, watering holes and fashion boutiques.

On the city's northeastern edge, Oaktown is primarily known for its diverse community of immigrants, but they have seen the area's low, brown hills filled with thousands of new lower-income homes. Many of them are lined up in neat train streets, side by side, located over what only a few years ago were pristine hillsides. Property values in the area remain low for the moment, but Oaktown's close proximity to the Central Business District makes it a potentially viable source for additional development.

LEXCORP EXPANDING

SOURCES STATE GOTHAM POSSIBLE

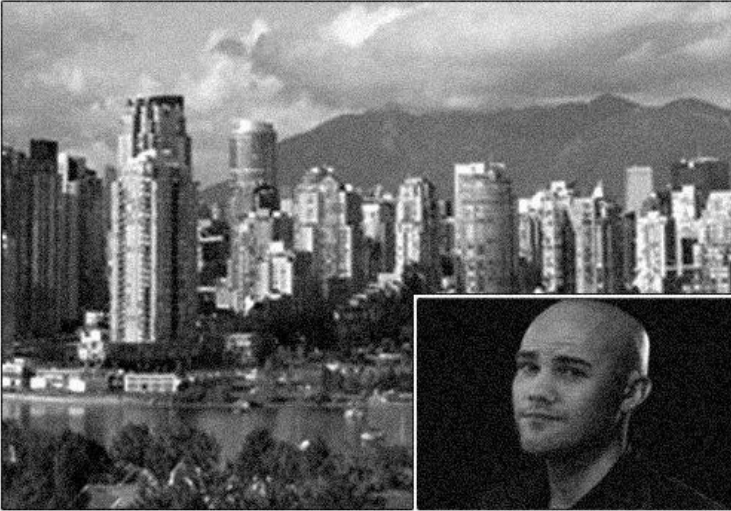

COMPETITOR DAGGETT MERGER

by Ron Troupe

An unidentified source has recently leaked information that LexCorp is aggressively buying property in Gotham City. The Metropolis corporation, headed by philanthropist and CEO Lex Luthor, has experienced a financial surge over the last ten years and now plans on furthering his company.

"We're excited at the possibility," says Mercedes Graves, a spokesperson for LexCorp. "Mr. Luthor has been actively seeking an expansion of the company for the last few years. And Mayor Anthony Garcia has been enthusiastic at the opportunity to bring us to Gotham."

The source claimed that a representative from Daggett Industries had contacted Mr. Luthor at the opportunity of purchasing the undisclosed property. Rolland Daggett and Lex Luthor have been in direct competition in the past, but the merging of the two tenacious businessmen has stockholders responding with great anticipation.

Lex Luthor was unavailable for comment, due to his recent Senate hearings in Washington DC. The official word from the Luthor Foundation is that he is in negotiations to help with Gotham City's rebuilding and renovations, after last year's terrorist attacks.

"It's been a long year," says Vernon Fields, an assistant to the DA's office in Gotham, and legal aid to Luthor during his years in Metropolis. "But we're making some real progress with the community and building a trust that we hope can benefit both of our great cities."

LexCorp plans to leave its mark on the city's health industry. They have already generously donated several million dollars to Gotham Memorial Hospital, built on the site of the destroyed Gotham General. But the company has also expressed interests in other landmarks and properties.

"Nobody is safe," laughed Rupert Thorne, an enthusiastic representative from the Gotham City Chamber of Commerce. "When a man like Lex Luthor, or a company as aggressive and competitive as LexCorp sets its sights on something it wants, he generally gets it."

CEO CARL BEAUMONT TO TESTIFY

by Sam Charpo

Last year, Beaumont International came under attack when links to organized crime in Metropolis and in Gotham City arose. After a drawn out investigation, a plea bargain was made for president and CEO of the company, Carl Beaumont. Sources from the bureau say that Mr. Beaumont has been extremely forthcoming with authorities in giving incriminating accounts of several heads of organized crime. They have stated that the Valesstra and Falcone crime family are the main sources that will be under investigation.

The investigation is looking into the emergence in the last decade of organized crime in the country, and their ties to other crime groups.

"Beaumont will tell how the Gotham mobsters used their muscle to cash in on schemes and frauds that the Russians developed, especially tax frauds and bootlegging," said a committee investigator who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Defense attorney Arthur Reeves, the committee's chairman, said in a statement yesterday that Mr. Beaumont will describe violent acts carried out by the Valesstra family for their confederates and how Gotham mobsters killed a Russian partner whom they suspected of disloyalty. "Carl Beaumont is the key witness the prosecution has been looking for," says Reeves. "It hasn't been easy for him or his family." The Beaumonts are currently in the witness protection program. Mr. Beaumont awaits his trial appearance early next month. "He is anxious to put this behind him and move on with his company

DOES METROPOLIS NEED A VIGILANTE?

by Lois Lane

Relief may have come to the citizens of Metropolis and other nearby residents of the community. A string of high-profile robberies that have plagued businesses and financial institutions during the last few months, has finally come to an end.

The organized crime syndicate, known as the Intergang, had been stealing large sums of money, jewelry and bonds. The head of the group, Bruno Mannheim, along with thirteen other suspected armed robbers that had been terrorising the New Troy district, were arrested last night after a gun battle with what appears to be an unknown vigilante.

"It's hard to describe just what happened," a witness stated to the police. "One moment we were surrounded by a dozen or so armed men. And an instant later, half of them were unconscious. They were literally taken down in the blink of an eye."

The other robbers began firing into the walls and ceiling of the Glenmorgan Capital Bank. According to witnesses, the shooting lasted for several seconds, before a side window shattered and the remaining criminals were thrown against the eastern wall.

When police arrived they found all fourteen robbers unconscious. Many sustained minor injuries and concussions.

Mr. Mannheim was unavailable for comment at this time, but witnesses reported him pleading with authorities to bring him in to the station for his own safety.

The official word is that a tremor beneath the building caused the robbers to be incapacitated. "The way they hit the ground and fired their guns was definitely out of panic," says Det. Henderson. "Already we're hearing lots of superstitious talk about a ghost saving these people. But, I'm guessing we're dealing with a gas leak in the building. It's getting people high off the fumes and seeing things that aren't there. Then it ignites and the explosion takes out the gang. Whatever it was, we should be happy the robberies have stopped."

But another witness claims to have seen more than just a ghost. "It was nothing short of astounding," says Bo Bibbowski. "This red and blue blur races through the glass. It shattered and then he beats the hell out of the gang. It was definitely a man. He was moving faster than a goddamn bullet."

Detective Henderson and Officer Maggie Sawyer are continuing their investigation for an explanation of what exactly happened last night. But it is safe to say that the Intergang won't be bothering Metropolis for quite some time. But what might not be quite so safe to say is that the city has a vigilante on its hands. And apparently quite a force to be reckoned with.

LEX LUTHOR TAKES SIX FLAGS FOR A RIDE!

ROLLER COASTER REDD EXCITES FANS, BUT
CLAWSHUN MOTIVES
QUESTIONED

By Lois Lane

Most thrill-seekers can't wait for the upcoming transformation of Six Flags New England's Supernova: Ride of Steel and Six Flags Great Escape: Aetheria roller coaster. But some roller coaster fans are raising questions about mega-corporate LexCorp's involvement in the project.

"Supernova: Ride of Steel and Aetheria are two great coasters," said Jonathan Whitener, president of the Metropolitan chapter of the American Association of Train-Blinders and Roller Coaster Fans (AATRCF). "Fans are excited by the idea of two premier coasters already favorite rides, but some people are wondering about the secrecy involved."

"The Supernova: Ride of Steel at Six Flags New England (outside of Springfield, Massachusetts) won America's Top 50 Golden Ticket Award in 2005 for best steel roller coaster, and Pink Panther: Riptide has named Supernova: Ride of Steel

The transformation of Six Flags' Supernova: Ride of Steel is causing excitement and concern over LexCorp's role.

the "number one coaster on the planet." Aetheria is a historic ride which was the first "Wooden" roller coaster when it opened in 1955.

"If anyone can improve Supernova: Ride of Steel and Aetheria, it's Lex Luthor," said David Parake, president of the American Museum of Roller Coasters. "But why would LexCorp tell us what they're planning to do?"

"The restoration project has been under a veil of mystery since it began," said James Sneyd, a Metropolis resident concerned about the transformation. Initially, Clawshun Industries refused to divulge their plans for the coaster makeover. Protesters were even spotted questioning Clawshun representatives in the park. When it was later announced that LexCorp is the parent company of Clawshun Industries, the mystery deepened.

"Keeping Clawshun Industries' actual owner a secret contributes to the feeling that LexCorp has something to hide with its transformation of Supernova: Ride of Steel and Aetheria," said Sneyd.

Not all fans share Sneyd's curiosity over the secrecy involved in the transformation. "If Lex Luthor is really behind the ride, that's the best news I've heard all year," said 16-year-old Metropolis resident Maxwell Humeau. "After all, how many times do we get a genius scientist and former President to transform roller coasters?"

Fans say they are voting out of admiration for the ride themselves. "We love Supernova: Ride of Steel and Aetheria and we are going to make sure the transformations make the best rides in the country even better," said AATRCF's chapter president Whitener.

By Lois Lane

It's not every day that a future super hero turns one year old. To mark this occasion, the parents of Clark Thomas Henderson have planned a birthday party.

"We're hoping all those who read this issue of The Daily Planet will make plans to attend," says Joshua Henderson, father of the one year old boy.

Clark flies over the city during a nice day in May.

"There will be lots of food," adds the mother of the birthday boy, Jenna Henderson, who says the menu will include chili. "We think Clark will have so much fun. We can't wait!" Clark, the birthday boy who will officially turn one on December 30th, declined to comment. ■

MAN CROSSES ATLANTIC SOLO, BECOMES HERO

LINDBERGH WITH HIS PLANE, THE SPIRIT OF ST LOUIS

By ZACH HOSKINS

On May 20th, 1927, Charles Lindbergh took off in The Spirit of St Louis from Roosevelt Field, Long Island. The single seat monoplane, heavy with 450 gallons of fuel, would land in Le Bourget Aerodrome, Paris, France thirty-three hours later. Lindbergh's flight marks the first solo non-stop flight from New York to Paris, and received the $25,000 Orteig Prize for his accomplishment.

Lindbergh, a former mail pilot, landed in France to the tune of an ecstatic crowd. He has been referred to as the "Lone Eagle" and has become an instant hero both in America and in Europe. On his landing, Lindbergh says "The lights of Le Bourget were plainly visible, but appeared to be very close to Paris. I had understood that the field was farther from the city, so continued out to the north-east into the country for four or five miles to make sure that there was not another field farther out which might be Le Bourget. Then I returned and spiralled (sic) down closer to the lights. Presently I could make out long lines of hangars, and the roads appeared to be jammed with cars. I flew low over the field once, then circled around into the wind and landed."

Lindbergh was given the Legion of Honor by the President of France, and escorted home by a convoy of warships and aircraft up the Chesapeake bay to Washington. Following his monumental achievement, Lindbergh began a nationwide tour, set to land in 49 states in his plane, The Spirit of St Louis.

Prohibition leads to rise in crime rate

By MADDIE MARY

The 1920's Prohibition of alcohol made production, import, export and sale of alcohol restricted. It was largely pushed by women, because they believed that it would make homes safer for families. It began on January 16, 1920, when the 18th Amendment was passed. However, prohibition did more harm than good for America. Organized crime boomed, allowing boot-leggers like Al Capone to build "his criminal empire."

Crime, which was expected to decline, benefited from the Prohibition. Arrests for Prohibition violations increased 102%, arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct increased 41%, homicides, assaults increased 13%, number of federal convicts increased 561%, and more. Organized crime formed around opportunities to make an assured income through alcohol, drugs, gambling and prostitution. Most of the alcohol the Mafia used for income came from Canada or ships located off US waters. Although Prohibition was supposed to reduce crime and make America a more wholesome place, it did the exact opposite.

Public oil scandal tarnishes former president's reputation

By ZACH HOSKINS

LAST KNOWN PICTURE OF PRESIDENT HARDING

Teapot Dome, an oil reserve in Wyoming, was deemed public land soon after its discovery by President William Taft. It was decided that the oil would be set aside for use exclusively by the US Navy in 1912. It was believed by many politicians and private oil companies that American oil companies could provide for the Navy, and resented the decision. Albert B. Fall, Secretary of the Interior as of 1921, convinced Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby, that Fall should take over control of the reserves in Wyoming as well as those in Elk Hills, California. Soon after, Fall allowed two of his friends, Edward L. Doheny of the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company and Harry F. Sinclair of Sinclair Oil to lease part of the land. Despite the secrecy with which Fall tried to conduct the transactions, the Wall Street Journal reported the lease on April 14th, 1922 following an investigation by the US Senate. Harding would be shown to defend Fall prior to his death in August of 1923. After hearings on the oil lease were completed, the leases were "executed under circumstances indicating fraud and corruption". Albert Fall and Edwin Denby were forced to resign from office.

The Scandal marks one of the first true symbols of governmental corruption in the United States, and is perhaps representative of the Harding administration.

SUPERMAN!

MYSTERY HERO SAVES FALLING SPACE PLANE

By EDIS LANE

AN enigmatic and powerful new superhuman hero emerged earlier today to the cheers of Metropolis' citizens, after saving the crew and passengers of the airplane Constitution, including this reporter, from certain death after a terrifying mid-air collision.

The accident occurred with a small civilian aircraft striking the experimental Fiero Air space plane on her left wing, having slipped through an aerial security cordon around Metropolis International airport. The Constitution was due to land at MIA as part of the city's 750th anniversary celebrations, with crowds gathering all over the city to witness the event. The two craft, locked together and billowing smoke, spun helplessly out of control and towards the masses of stunned onlookers.

Seeming to spring both from the panicking crowds, a man dressed in a brightly-colored costume and cape took off from the ground, leaping higher than the tallest of buildings, and in the direction of the oncoming wrecks. In a blur of red and blue, the speeding figure flew towards the plummeting craft, making contact with the underside of the space plane. In a display of herculean strength, the stranger began leveling the intertwined aircraft, bringing them to land safely on the main runway of Metropolis International.

SOMETHING STRANGE IS UP AT SIX FLAGS

MYSTERIOUS LIGHTNING STRIKES TWO ROLLER COASTERS

By Lois Lane

In what can only be described as a "freak occurrence," an unexplained bolt of lightning-like energy struck two Six Flags theme parks yesterday. Occurring within minutes of each other, the bolts hit both the Superman: Ride of Steel and Medusa roller coasters.

Some onlookers described the coasters as being "transformed" after the "lightning" struck them.

"First I saw an enormous beam of light hit the coaster," said witness Jack Knell of Trenton, NJ. "Then, an earsplitting sound, like a tear or a rip, filled the air. When I looked back at the ride, it was pulsing like a wave of energy was moving down the track."

Angel Aristone, Spokesperson for Six Flags Great Adventure, denied that the event has transformed the coasters in any unplanned way.

"The coasters were already under re-development and are currently on schedule," said Aristone. "We are very excited to introduce these re-imagined rides to the public in May, 2009."

In both cases, the incident could be seen miles away, and witnesses gave similar reports of a "giant laser-beam" or "massive oval of energy in the sky."

The event began at 10:21pm at Six Flags Great Adventure in Jackson, NJ. Eyewitness Dirk Kressler, 43, called 911 immediately after seeing a "focused yellowish beam" hit the Medusa roller coaster. "It looked like a major explosion. There was smoke and what felt like an electrical charge in the air."

At the same time, calls began streaming in to police and fire stations around Agawam, MA, home of Six Flags New England.

"We must have received over 30 calls in the space of a few minutes," said the Agawam Police Chief. Fortunately, no injuries were reported at either location.

Melissa Pinkerton, Six Flags New England Spokesperson, stated that the company is investigating the incidents, but assures the public that both parks will open as scheduled for the season.

BIZARRE SUPERMAN SIGHTINGS REPORTED

By Josef Schuman

The Metropolis Police Department is investigating reports of a "peculiar Superman-like creature" in the city, sources told the Daily Planet.

With pale, white skin, and a bulky, lumbering demeanor, this "twisted" version of Superman looks just "a little bit off," said Myra Jeffridges, 23, who gave a statement to police after an incident at Metropolis Park.

"I've seen Superman before, and this definitely wasn't him," said Jeffridges. "Besides, Superman wouldn't have taken a woman's kitty cat and put it up in a tree."

Speculation has mounted that these unusual "Superman" sightings might actually be Bizarro. Bizarro has come to Metropolis before, and while he has battled Superman on many occasions, he is said to be less of a "super-villain" and more of a "strange lost soul."

"This could be Bizarro, so the entire SCU is reviewing our files on him," said Special Crimes Unit, head Maggie Sawyer. She also added that, while little is known about him, Bizarro is believed to be from a parallel Earth known as Htrae where inhabitants believe in "doing the opposite of all Earthly things."
